The military sources said that the armed forces were under heavy pressure to wind up the compaign in East Pakistan by early next week so that India; can establish the Bang's Desh regime in Pakistan and then accept the cease-fire call. Speed is desired, they said, so that India can avoid more criticism in the United Nations, whose cease-fire and troop-withdrawal appeal was accepted yesterday by Pakistan.

In another speech today, broadcast to her armed forces, Mrs. Gandhi asserted that all India Pakistan has said that its and persons of all other religiousare united behind the military, "as determined as you to defeat the aggressor."

There were reports here that Vassily Kuznelsov, Deputy Foreign Minister of the Soviet Union, which supports India in its showdown with Pakistan, was expected here today. Diplomatic sources said he might caution the Indians against continuing the war once they have won in East Pakistan. Indian Foreign Ministry spokesman S.K. Singh said today that a high official of his ministry will go to Moscow tomorrow for consultations.

Indian newspepers reported today another indication that India will move quickly to establish the Bangla Desh regime in East Pakistan-by sending in civilian administrators, including police, to help the new secessionist government. Such help will be designed to normalize life in the new nation by putting down violence by remnants of the cnemy military units, by preventing looting and—in short—by giving the new regime an aura of respectability and stability.

Presidential Race in Italy Deadlocked on Third Ballot

1,008-member electoral college remained deadlocked today on the second day of voting to choose Italy's sixth president. On the third ballot-the only round of polling today---Vice-Premier Francesco de Martino, chairman of the Socialist party, received 404 votes and former Premier Amintore Fanfani, the Christian Democratic candidate, Voting will resume at 5:30 p.m. tomorrow. From tomorrow's fourth ballot onward only a straight majority of 505 votes will be required for the election of a new head of state. Under the constitution, a hard-to-reach two-thirds majority was necessary on the first three ballots.

Even before today's voting closed shortly before noon, feverish activity started behind the scenes to break the impasse and establish a majority lineup for one of the two men who had been front runners up to now, or for some new candidate.

The leader of the neo-Fascist Italian Social Movement, Giorgo Almirante claimed in a newspaper editorial today thet supporters of unidentified candidates for the presidency had secretly approached his party seeking its help. Publicly, all major parties have declared they did not want neo-Fascist backing would not negotiate with Mr. Almirante's party, which has 23 members in the assembly.

The outgoing head of state, whose seven-year-term expires on December 28, received 51 votes today, five more than on yesterday'e second ballot. The constitu-tion allows reflection of the president, but none of Mr. Saragat's four predecessors served for more than one term.

Today's Voting In today's voting, Giovanni Malagodi, leader of the Liberal party, received 50 votes and the chairman of the neo-Pascist party. Augusto de Marsanich, 38. Four votes went to members of the assembling who officially are not or not yet-in the running, and 62 ballots were blank. Speculation centered on the chances of Mr. Fanfani, the official candidate of Italy'e strongest political movement. On the third ballot today he received the same number of votes as on the first and 14 more than on the second. However, some 35 "grand electors" belonging to the Christian Democratic party ap-

As in Rome, the French intention is to find a position that will not-offend the Soviet Union. In Rome, it was to oppose talks on mutual and balanced force reductions, which the Russians were later to accept in principle—to French embarrassment.

This time, with support from the Scandinavians and Belgians, the French argued that the Berlin agreement would be effectively concluded as soon as the inter-German talks were over, that is, apparently this weekend. As things have turned out, the French would have security conference preparations in Helsinki begin immediately before a final Big-Four Berlin agreement. The French actually have been embarrassed by the Soviet Union's inability or unwillingness to get the East Germans to agree on Berlin before this NATO meet-

The United States, Britain and West Germany, who are more suspicious of Moscow, want to await the final Big-Four protocol signature on Berlin. The Russians, equally suspicious, don't want to sign anything before the Bundestag's ratification.

But, despite the apparent sophistication of the argument, it clearly created some discomfort here—and resulted in the peculiar differences in the texts.

The English-language text says simply that the NATO ministers "appreciated" the Finnish government's invitation to offer Helsinki for the first multilateral conversations on security conference preparations. The French-language text states that the min-"are favorable" to the Finnish action.

Joseph Luns, the new NATO secretary-general, said that these translations had been discussed by the council but that, in the end, the council members had given in to French Foreign Minister Maurice Schumann's superior knowledge of French, Nonetheless, it clearly indicated that the French have become the chief Western champions of the security conference and have adopted a posture that appears to be much more accommodating to the Warsaw Pact countries.

> Brosio Mission The 14 NATO countries that originally called for talks on mutual and balanced force reduc-tions (MBFR), that is all the countries except France, issued a new call in today's communique for the Soviet Union to receive Manlio Brosio, who has been designated as an MBFR "explorer." Mr. Luns, in a press conference this afternoon, even suggested that Mr. Brosic might not be willing to "wait forever"

An Indian military spokesman said Pakistani troops were "put-ting up stiff resistance and holding out" at Hill in the northwest, Kushtir in the southwest, Jamalpur in the north and the Comilla military station in the east of the embettled province. India reported that it took Laksham today after determined enemy resistance.

India had earlier claimed the capture of the town of Comille itself. India withdrew today its claim of having captured the river town of Narayanganj, about eight miles south of Dacca.

Narayanganj was reported part of the southward escape route of many Pakistani troops. India said it was bypassing dug-in enemy positions to concentrate on pursuing the enemy soldiers who were fleeing, so that they could not regroup. It said that after putting them out of the way. Indian forces would turn to attacks on the main Pakistani pockets of resistance.

An Indian spokesman said the remaining cohesive garrisons of Pakistanis were "surrounded by our forces" and many of the enemy soldiers in them "want to surrender." These soldiers, he said, have received the following orders: "We wish to gain time. Something may happen, Hold." But the spokesman said that nevertheless, some Pakistanis were deserting their isolated garrisons to join the tide of enemy fleeing

U.S. Changes Draft Rules For Aliens

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10 (UPI)., -The Selective Servica System changed its rules today so that foreigners visiting and working in the United States no longer need worry about ending up in the U.S. Army.

Under the old regulations, businessmen or other allens with no plans to become a citizen were liable for induction after living in the United States a year, Now they cannot be drafted under any circumstances.

The old rules also said an alien planning to become a U.S. citizen could be drafted after he filed his citizenship papers. Under the new rules, he has a year before he is liable for conscription.

Any immigrant who has served at least a year in the armed forces of a U.S. ally will be exempt from the draft. In the past, 18 months service for another nation was required for exemption in the United States. Belgium, Denmark, France, West Germany and Norway require military service of less than 18 months.

Vietnam's 'Korean Solution'

The administration's much-bruited concept of a possible "Korean solution" for Vietnam appears to be taking on a new meaning.

The old concept—a long-term retention in South Vietnam (as earlier in South Korea) of a residual force of American troops—was stated by President Nixon last month to be an essential ingredient of his Vietnamization policy. But in addition, it seems that a substantial force of South Korean ground troops is being encouraged by the United States to remain in South Vietnam to insure an anti-Communist Salgon regime. Among the inducements for President Park, who is anxious to keep American troops in South Korea, is Mr. Nixon's postponement of any major reductions in the 43,000 American troops still there. And the United States is reported to have promised to continue to provide the ROK troops in Vietnam with virtually all their sopplies and combat pay if they remain.

Serious talk in Seoul of withdrawing ROK troops from Vietnam began only after the Nixon administration last year revealed plans to withdraw American troops from South Korea over a five-year period as ROK forces were modernized with American military aid. President Park, arguing vehemently against withdrawals before the five-year modernization was completed, threatened to pull all ROK forces out of Vietnam by the end of

The linkage between American troops in South Korea and Korean troops in South Vietnam dates back to a power play by President Johnson in 1965. At a time when all Asian allies were being urged to aid South Vietnam, South Korea was notified of a tentative American plan to withdraw the two American divisions there from forward positions. They were to be based, instead, near the southern port of Pusan as a "strategic reserve" for Asia as a whole. President Park, seeing the handwriting on the wall, offered to send equivalent Korean forces to Vietnam if the two American divisions would remain in place near the North Korean

One of these American divisions was removed from Korea early this year and inactivated. The other was moved back some miles to a tactical reserve posture. Proposals to bring it home and inactivate it for budget reasons in the fiscal year beginning next July have been vetoed by President Nixon. But the proposals had more impact in Seoul than the veto. They have been cited, along with impending congressional cutbacks in military aid, among President Park's reasons for declaring a state of national emergency.

This Korean reaction undoubtedly was foreseen in Washington. Mr. Nixon was reported to be influenced by the argument that too rapid American withdrawal from South Korea would damage morale there and in Japan. But Vietnamese considerations undoubtedly have been dominant. In the decision he soon must make on the size of the American residual force to remain in South Vietnam after next summer, Mr. Nixon reportedly confronts options ranging from 30,000 to 90,000 troops. If 38,000 Korean troops are still on hand, it will be easier to opt. for the lower end of the spectrum-a course which offers greater assurance of keeping the Vietnam issue out of the presidential campaign.

The danger is that the United States will emerge from next year's election to find itself locked in, not only in Vietnam but in Korea as well by a "Korean solution" for Vietnam that neither ends the war nor the American involvement, but continues both indefinitely.

Ralph J. Bunche

There can hardly be a land in which the death of Ralph Bunche will not be mourned as though he were one of their own. He rose beyond nationality until in a true sense he was a citizen of the world, with all mankind his constituency. His was the noblest service to which a man could be committed—the service of peace. All his life, it seemed, was a preparation for that service, an education in the arts of concliation and rapprochement and the promotion of understanding, the essential stuff of diplomacy.

He learned as an American how to moderate the implacable mistrust of racial antagonism. And he learned as an international civil servant, rising to the summit of the United Nations hierarchy, how to assuage inveterate rivalries and hostilities between nations. It seems quite fair to say that the UN achieved its highest usefulness and effectiveness in the time when Ralph Bunche painstakingly worked out an Arab-Israell agreement on the Island of Rhodes that preserved an uneasy peace in the Middle East for the better part of two decades and when he headed the UN's successful effort to prevent the spread of civil war in the liberated Belgian Congo. Like another great leader of his race, he had a dream-of a United Nations capable of keeping the peace -and he spoke eloquently of it when accepting his Nobel Peace Prize in 1950.

Though he was a man of peace and a man of reason, Ralph Bunche was also a man capable of boiling indignation at the infustices and discriminations inflicted upon Negroes in America. He was, in the best meaning of the term, a militant champion of human equality. He served that cause most conspicuously and perhaps most effectively when he declined an offer by President Truman to make him an Assistant Secretary of State. He declined the offer. he said quietly and articulately, because he did not wish to subject his wife and children to the indignities of segregation that then prevailed in Washington. His statement stung the conscience of the country and roused it as no amount of ranting or violence could have done.

Ralph Bunche was a gentle, learned man of action. He achieved much in the long years of his service to peace. And he left a legacy of hope in the depth of his belief in the perfectibility of man.

Indo-Pakistani Conflict

The big battle for Asia bas begun between the U.S.S.R. and China. . . There is also reason to believe that the Americans, who as of now appear to have lost India as they previously lost Egypt, will not stop at that point. One can guess that when he visits Peking Nixon will make precise offers of economic aid or even political arrangements in order to prove to a China suddenly weakened on the international scene the American goodwill for rapprochement.

In this assumption, the U.S. President's visit to Moscow could only take place under bad conditions, or even not take place at all, depending on the importance of American concessions. . .

Anyway, the new Indo-Pakistani war now widely exceeds the scope of the Indian subcontinent. It is likely to take on much greater proportions: those of a confrontation among three big powers. One can even wonder whether this potential confrontation is not likely to do harm to Mr. Brezhnev's peace offensive in Europe.

-From Le Figaro (Paris).

The spectacle offered by the UN discussing the Indo-Pakistani war is particularly sinister. The "superpowers" are seen vilifying one another, the Soviets in defense of India, the Americans and Chinese in defense of Pakistan while the "middle" powers such as France and Britain seek refuge in abstention and the mere expression of pious wishes for a cease-fire.

That behavior is not surprising: The big powers are continuing their confrontation by proxy and only think of making their interests prevail without caring for the sufferings of millions of human beings. The attitude of the middle powers is scarcely more respectable. France and Britain demonstrate in New York a virtuous indignation while forgetting that they have supplied the two belligerents with the weapons that permit them to merrily massacre each thing, as everybody knows, but you never really understand how much thump it packs until you see it operating in another capital.

Even the United States' closest friends, the Canadians, don't quite know what to make of it. Prime Minister Trudeau is back here now from Washington saying he is "reassured" by President Nixon's sincerity and understanding of Canada's economic problem, but Canada as a whole does not seem

Canada hasn't yet learned how to live with its giant neighbor to the south, which is not so surprising since we occasionally have a little trouble learning to live with each other. The United States, in Canadian eyes, always seems to be ignoring Canada or smothering it with business and, what is worse, just taking it for granted-smothering and ignoring Canada at the same time, and

OTTAWA.—The power of the maybe even corrupting her in the United States is an awasome process.

Trudeau returned from Washington and told the House of Commons here not to worry too much about this. In the privacy of his office he emphasized tha point. It was true that President Nixon had launched a new China policy and a new economic policy without advance warning to Canada, and this was embarrassing to the Canadian government, but in spite of this, and in spite of Secretary of the Treasury Connally's tough economic language, Nixon had told him he had no intent to insist on a dominant trade position with Canada.

Not Impressed

Trudeau's political opponents in the House of Commons were not impressed. Robert L. Stanfield, leader of the opposition, said that had never occurred to him "that the United States had any desire to pursue policies intentionally designed to cripple Canada. The question really is." he said, "what view does the United States administration have with regard to balance of trade and terms of trade? What view does the United States administration regard as consistent with its own interests? What view does the United States administration have as to when its actions might impinge upon the independence or antonomy of Canada?"

David Lewis, national leader of the Canadian New Democratic party, was much more critical. LONDON,-In the United States the President makes foreign policy. That understanding is fundamental to the constitutional system. In the end the American voice will be heard clearly only when he speaks.

But there are great dangers in presidential policy-making, one of them that the process of decision may be too closely-held, too personal. A striking example of this danger is afforded by President Nixon's policy in the Indo-Paki-

Mr. Nixon is a committed supporter of Pakistan. The extent of that commitment, if anyone doubted it, was made clear when in receiving a new Pakistani am-bassador he publicly welcomed "the efforts of President Yahya Khan to move to reduce tensions in the subcontinent." That of a man whose forces in the last eight mouths have cold-bloodedly murdered thousands of innocent civilians and forced millions to flee because of their race—the most savage pogrom the world has seen in many years.

Incredulity

Among those who know or care about the Indian subcontinent.
American policy has evoked widespread incredulity. That may rest on moral grounds, as in the case of a former American official in Pakistan who wrote Mr. Nixon to say that he could not square the policy with "my life as an American." Or the reaction may be as hard-boiled as that of the Economist of London, which in an article highly critical of India said "it is a mystery why the Americans should have chosen to climb so ostentatiously on board the sinking Pakistani

The President must have recognized that his policy had gone to a self-defeating extreme when he sent a White House side out to explain it all to the press. There was a defensive tone to what this unidentified man said. We still thought India was a great democracy, he said, and a staunch friend, But she had precipitately broken up secret American efforts to bring President Yahya to e political settlement with the Bengali rebels-efforts that had been near suc-

Is it conceivable that the White House official believed that explanation as he gave it? Sincerity must be assumed, but it would really be worrisome if a serious man believed such a fantasy as the idea of an imminent political agreement being aborted by India.

Pirst, there never has been any realistic chance of a settlement with the Bengalis unless Yahva freed their leader, Sheik Mnjibur Rahman, and talked with him. The informed men in the State Department, the British Foreign pointing out that Burnham's ex-that. But Yahya kept him to these factors; certainly they imprisoned and put him on secret were well known to the President's chief foreign policy adviser, Henry Kissinger. Why, then, did Mr. Second, according to qualified Nixon react so intemperately, so American sources, Yahya in his emotionally on the side of Paki> stan when hostilities began? The emotion suggests that the President felt himself involvedand injured—on a very personal level. It is well known that Mr: Nixon has long liked and respected Yahya Khan. On the other hand, he is said to have found Mrs. Indira Gandhi cold and didactic. In the words of one close observer, "this was a matter of personal chemistry."

Beyond that, the President had invested his own political capital in the effort to heal the Pakistani division. However remote in fact, he must have thought he had a chance to pull off a diplomatic coup and been overcome by pique at its failure. Then, too, there was the threat that an Indo-Pakistani war might pose to his boldest diplomatic venture, the trip to Pe-

What all this shows is the risk of over-personalization when a President takes to himself too much of the process of foreign policy-making. The Nixon-Kis-singer operation works well in important ways, avoiding the deadening bureaucracy of the State Department. But it is quite wrong when it allows the policy of a great power to be so sharply affected by personal feeling without the restraints of time and reflection that a system provides.

America. It has been the result of decisions by Canadian political and business leaders to hand over our resources to the American corporations and to ask American capital to come into this country build branch plants as subsidiaries of multinational corporations." No doubt there is a lot of domestic Canadian politics in all this, but one thing is common in the remarks of Stanfield, Lewis and even Trudeau: They are all obviously concerned that the United States is so powerful economically that it will dominate Canada's economic life even if it has no intention to do so.

Adds Emphasis Trudeau was "reassured" that there was no official purpose in Washington to do so, because, as he explained to this reporter, he was treated by Nizon with un-falling courtesy and candid analysis of the economic problems of the two countries. More than that, it was clear from what tha prime minister said that he had come back to Ottawa with a new feeling of trust in Nixon's intentions.

But this only emphasizes the problem of America's economic power in the world, for that powerdoes not depend wholly or even mainly on the good intentions and promises of the President of the United States.

It depends very largely on the movement of U.S. capital into other countries, including Canada, By doing what comes naturally to American corporations-in fact by being faithful to their investors-U.S. business concerns move into Canada, each in its own way, and in the process both contribute to Canada's economic progress and diminish its economic independence.

This is only one illustration of America's power in the world. As Ambassador Charles E. Bohlen of the United States once remarked, "Our main problem with our allies is simply that we are too damn big and rich."

Trudeau is right in being reassured by Nixon's courtesy and careful understanding of Canada's economic problems and by Nixon's promise not to insist on an American policy of dominating Canada's economic life.

But in economic terms, Nixon is not America. He cannot control the vast power and movement of U.S. money into Canada or many other countries. He can "reassure" Trudeau that he has no intention to dominate Canada's economy or diminish its independence. But American business has a life of its own, and this is clearly what is still worrying the Canadians, despite Nixon's promises and Trudeau's reassur-

Two 'Solutions'

Reading the editorial "The War Proceeds" (IRT. Dec. 8), I am amazed that you could discuss seriously the solution of "immediste cease-fire and mutual troop withdrawals behind the respective borders." This so-called solution would be the worst possible at the present moment (and has no chance of being accepted by India). It would be a signal for the Yahya Khan troops to go on with the genocide. The only realistic and fair solution is the release of Mujibur Rahman, the leader of Bangla Desh, and the recognition of Bangla Desh independence by West Pakistan—then the cease-fire and withdrawal of troops should be discussed.

I am sure that the people of Bangla Desh who have suffered and fought for their lives since March will not accept any other ALAIN ROUSSEAU.

Burnham's latest nonsense in support of Greek faseism is no surprise. What is is that a responsible newspaper would give space to someone who plays so fast and loose with fact and

Criminals Ask Ransom Of 7 Million Marks

ESSEN, West Germany, Dec. 10 (UPI).—Kidnappers have demanded a seven-million-mark ransom for the release of a millionaire West German chain-store owner seized 12 days ago, police announced today.

"The amount of the ransom demanded is unprecedented in West Germany," Essen police chief Hans Kirchhoff told a news conference at which police an-nounced the kidnapping. The victim is Theo Albrecht, 49, who, with his brother Karl built

The wish of Mr. Albrecht's wife and two sons, aged 22 and 18, to keep out of the limelight kept them from informing police about the kidnapping until the last few days. Employees in the Albrecht chain of "Aldi-Market" stores knew nothing about it until to-day's police announcement.

Public Prosecutor Gerd Lindenburg told the news conference the family also was reluctant to inform police because a letter from the kidnappers warned that if they did so, Mr. Albrecht would

Police said the family had ap-pointed a close friend to act as go-between with the kidnappers. "The kidnappers can approach this friend without risk, because we are not keeping him under surveillance," the police chief said, He said police feared that if they

China Loses UN Unit Vote On A-Test Ban Peking Delegate Cites 2 Superpowers' Lead

UNITED NATIONS, Dec. 10 (UPI).—A major UN committee yesterday adopted three resolutions prohibiting nuclear weapons tests. China voted against all of them because, it said, such a ban would prevent it from developing nuclear arms as protection against the "nuclear threat" of the United States and the Soviet

The four other nuclear powersthe United States, the Soviet Union, Britain and France—abstained from the voting. France and China are the only nuclear powers that conduct tests in the atmosphere.

Formal approval of the resolutions by the General Assembly still is required. But it was certain to adopt the resolutions since its full membership is represented on the committee.

Explaining Peking's position in the General Assembly's 131-mem-ber Political Committee, the Chlnese deputy permanent representative, Ambassador Chen Chu, said that China could not give up necessary self-defense measures before they were realized.

Backed by Albania

He then cast negative votes on the three resolutions. The only other delegation to vote against the resolutions, which were adopted with strong majorities, was Albania, China's only European ally. A large number of delegates abstained, however.

Mr. Chen emphasized that China always had favored the complete prohibition and destruction of nuclear weapons and that it had proposed a global con-ference and early agreement on this problem. China, he said, "has to develop nuclear weapons because it is under nuclear threat of the two superpowers. Its tests are there-fore in self-defense."

ART MARKET: Contradictory Price Trends at Old Masters Sale

By Souren Melikian

TONDON, Dec. 10 (IHT).—If contradictory price trends at a given Lisale may be interpreted as indicators of an incipient crisis, then all the signs of an uncomfortable future were present at Sotheby's sale of old masters Wednesday.

The auction included 131 lots, ranging from works by the finest Flemish primitives to 18th-century Italian landscape artists. Both in terms of quality and of provenance, the sale can be considered one of the best ever held in London.

There was a Jean-Honoré Fragonard which had never left the possession of the Harcourt family. The subject is Anne-François d'Harcourt, Duc de Beuvron, son of the then Duc d'Harcourt. There was a view of the Sant'Angelo Bridge in Rome by Antonio Joli, offered for sale by the trustees of the Evelyn Waugh Settlement. The Earl of Haddington had sent in a fine trecento triptych. Such orous provenances enhanced the quality of the pictures, many of which were of the highest possible order.

The sale was conducted by Peter Wilson. No doubt his un-on the remarkable prices for many of the works in the sale,

The most interesting price was that fetched by the Fragmard portrait. It sold for £340,000, the highest figure every reached by a single picture at Sotheby's in London. The price is extraordinary when one remembers that this portrait belongs to a group called "Portraits de Fantaisle" and, therefore, is not unique. On fact, there is a companion portrait in the group of the Duc de Beuvron's brother.) Therefore, a major museum could not possibly feel that the portrait up for sale would be the last Fragmand of this period and style to go on the market. Moreover, it is common knowledge in the trade that the Beuvron portrait had been offered for sale in New York by a dealer and had failed to find a buyer-no doubt because the asking price was high. However beautiful or important a picture may be this sort of thing is often enough to kill it, commercially speaking. Under these circumstances, the price it made at Sotheby's remarkable and proves that, in some cases, the auction system can follow a pattern totally unrelated to the dealers' market,

The second highest price, £120,000, was paid for a Hans Baldung Grien religious scene on a panel, "St. John the Evangelist on the Island of Patmos." In my view, the price was also fantastically high. The picture is not one of the painter's best works and the simpering expression on St. John's face is hardly suited to modern taste

Leaving aside these two pictures, all the other works of high quality that conformed to conventional British testes reached, in my opinion, their maximum prices. Among them were a superb portrait of Mary Tudor, queen of England, as well as a series of excellent landscapes by Philips Worwermans, the Dutch 17th-century landscape artist, and scenes of Rome and Venice by 18th-century painters.

The Queen Mary I portrait, painted by Rans Eworth probably in 1554, is tiny (8 1/8 inches by 6 5/8 inches). Eworth, the queen's official portraitist, was a fine painter—but nothing more. At £28,000, the painting sold very well indeed. The landscape showing the Sant'Angelo Bridge by Antonio Joli is an oversized postcard for 18th-century Englishmen on the grand tour of Europe—and £23,000 is a crazy price for such a work. Canaletto (Antonio Canale) is admittedly a better artist but his "Entrance to the Grand Canal" is academic in the extreme and £30,000 was a high price for it.

"Old Walton Bridge," also by Canaletto, was expensive at £52,000 and the price illustrates a point about taste. (It was bought by the London gallery Baskett and Day) This work was apparently commissioned by Samuel Dicker, a member of Parliament for Portsmouth, who had also paid for the wooden bridge across the Thames. Thus the picture by Canaletto can be considered part of the British

As opposed to such prices which allow one to call Sotheby's sale a big success, others were extremely low and point to a disturbing trend. An example of one of the several lots which were obviously

Another strikingly low price was paid for a picture still in catalogue to be by Laurent de Le Hire. In it Achille's a visional among the daughters of Lycomedes in the typical Friends class manner of the mid-1800s. It sold for £1,300. A well-triggin a noisseur had finis comment. The picture is horing This could be applied to Antonio Jost's view of Roughts and for £23,000j. Furthermore, mid-17th-century French patrix are far rarer than 18th-century Ralian landscapes. are far rarer than 18th-century Italian landscapes.

Thus, while the sale was highly successful from the nurties, point of view, I can't help feeling that the market is beauting for a difficult moments.

The salesnowns are probably better aminped than principalities to cope with the changing situation. During the past week Solide registered another world record for a Benin branze head witch auctioned for £29,000. However fine the place may be home interesting its provenance (it had been given to the owners with by a Benin ruler before the British punitive expeditions in Negative. the 19th century), I very much doubt that such a nices would been obtained in the trade.

Jean-Claude Binoche's sale of avant-pards art had Sunday the Palais Galliers in Paris (IHT, Dec. 4-5) was an impression success. The room was packed and the audience had a highly-a surprising 5,336 france.

The most significant aspect of the sale was the presence of large number of foreign professionals—mostly from Germany Belgi and Switzerland. Binoche's next sale, to take place in March, to be followed closely. If the phenomenon should repeat itself, might mean that a new market is laying down its own rules at any for avant-garde work. And, as far as Europe is concerned, the cer of the market would appear to be Paris, with Bluoche and assistant Marie-Claude Tubiana emerging as preminent figures.

Coronado, a Spaniard, was trained in Stockholm, but his northern education has done little to alter his essentially Mediterranean spirit. Apart from being a brilliant colorist, Coronado is difficult to categorize. His oils, which could be taken for abstracts at first sight, reveal a world of figuration. This is his first ex-hibition in England, but from the look of it, one can confidently predict more for an artist still in his twenties.

Weatherly is a wildlife artist and a naturalist. He was born and grew up on an isolated sheep station in Australia and taught himself how to carve animals in wood almost as soon as he could read. He came to England to study history at Cambridge and continued to make drawings from which he would later make carvings. Now the drawings have almost taken over, though there are seven of his wood sculptures in the show. His recent gousches, watercolors. and drawings are mostly of birds, many painted in their natural surroundings in Africa, others at the Sladmore Farm collection of tropical birds and waterfowl where he has had the advice and encouragement of possibly the greatest of English

The paintings must be seen in the daytime and by the light of day. They were painted by daylight, and electric light filters out some of the colors. It is not a matter that these works look better by daylight nor that one should see the "authentic" colors. It is quite simply that the paintings come alive under natural light while electric light somehow suspends the life in them and reduces them to no more than agreeably colored sur-

To be sure, they allow one to "know" that Rothko painted roughly rectangular areas of color (usually two or three of them, one above the other) covering the whole surface of the canvas except for a narrow border. The miracle with Rothko is which our age has made an obsession, more fears are piled, that he succeeds in reaching this level in the present age. In one of his essays he speaks of the both deeper and more vital. Of drama of transcendent experience which he wishes to represent.

Heavy Dollar Cut Needed, Expert Warns

Sees Risk if Change In Parity Too Small

By Hobart Rowen WASHINGTON, Dec. 10 (WP). An influential American economist is warning against a hasty settlement on exchange rates that might leave the dollar still over-valued and subject to a new speculative run. Edward M. Bernstein, former research director of the International Monetary Fund, says that "the risks attending an inadequate change in the parity of the dollar are far too great to be assumed either by the United. States or by other countries."

Without saying so specifically, Mr. Bernstein apparently feels that the II percent appreciation of other currencies proposed by the United States at the Rome meeting of the G-10 would not be sufficient to restore the longrun U.S. payments position.

Mr. Bernstein, head of EMB Ltd., a Washington-based research agency, made his comments in an analysis for Model, Roland & Co.

Phase 2 Optimism

In respect to the American economy and its prospects for recovery in 1972, Mr. Bernstein was relatively optimistic, suggest-ing that businessmen's fears that the Phase 2 controls program would interfere with profits were probably not justified."

His forecast for gross national product in current dollars was for an increase to $1,140 billion "or higher," a gain of 8.5 per-cent, of which 5 percent would be real, and inflation would account for 3.5 percent. This is on the low end of the general consensus among forecasters. He also pointed out that such a recovery would leave unemployment relatively high. The critical need, on the inter-national side, according to Mr. Bernstein, is to eliminate the U.S. balance-of-payments deficit, to which he attributes the chronic exchange rate crises of recent years. But, according to his calculation, an average 11 percent appreciation of other currencies (which is equivalent to a 10 percent devaluation of the dollar) would not be enough unless ac-companied at the same time by trade concessions and an easing U.S. military costs

The main elements in the He recognized that other nations "want the depreciation of the dollar as small as possible" to were a cut in the minimum prevent a sudden dccline in their exports-the kind of decline that could cause a recession.

"Basic to this," he said, "le an adequate depreciation of the dol-Bundestag Votes lar to restore the competitive position of the United States." The major danger he foresees in not letting the dollar drop sufficiently is a further depletion of U.S. reserves if the dollar were again made convertible into reserve assets.

A necessity to suspend dollar convertibility once again—if it should be restored—would finally wreck the Brettoo Woods system and enhance growing protectionist sentiment, Mr. Bernstein

Ford Raises Prices

DETROIT, Dec. 10 (Rauters) .-Ford Motor Co. said today it will raise suggested retail prices of ears and trucks by an average 2.6 percent, in line with General Motors Corp. The boost comes out to $90 a car and $86 a truck and represents a slightly smaller by the Price Commission. The panel had authorized a 2.9 percent boost by Ford, but GM's lead evidently forced Ford to follow

Bulls Clash With Bears on 'Rally' By Philip Greer At the other end of the scale is David Bostian

NEW YORK, Dec. 10 (WP) .- A lot of people in Wall Street think the stock market has turned the corner and is hended for a good rally. But another large contingent thinks it is not necessarily so-at least not yet.

In the wake of the post-Thanksgiving Day rally-which caught almost everybody by surprise as it pushed the Dow Jones industrial average ahead more than 60 points in six days—the outlook for the market eeems to depend on who is doing the looking—and, maybe, what he is looking at.

In large part, the difference in outlook reflects the split between those who study market fundsmentals such as earnings, dividends, management records and new products, and the technicians who watch market movements. The first group is almost universally optimistic; the second is still not convinced that stocks are out of the

One recent convert to the bullish side is Robert Stovall of Reynolds Securities. The developments that changed Mr. Stovall's opinion took place after the rally began with a 17-point burst on the day after Thanksgiving. "The market loves a timetable and it got one during the first week of December." he says. "The pros are con-vinced the United States will make a deal on exchange rates, gold and trade before Nixon goes to Peking on Feb. 14."

Waiting for Devaluation

Barring any new uncertainty, Mr. Stovall sees the progression going something like this: The professionals are buying now ("institutions have been builish right along"), foreign investors, who have been deserting U.S. stocks for months, will come back when the dollar is finally devalued ("Why buy stocks with marks worth 39 cents when you can wait and buy them with marks worth 31 cents or more?") and finally the public will begin putting back the money it has been taking out for years.

Upward Movement Slows

Mr. Weinstein says the market has shown "good rallying power," but adds that "the upward momentum is slowing down." He notes a greater willingness to trade on the part of mutual funds, insurance companies and other large-scale in-

4 Fed Banks

Cut Discount WASHINGTON, Dec. 10 (AP-DJ).-The Federal Reserve Board today authorized four district banks to cut the discount rate to 4 1/2 percent from 4 3/4 percent effective Monday.

The discount rate is the one set on losts to commercial banks, which scale their own lending rates up from this key cost of credit.

The four banks are St. Louis, Boston, Kansas City and San Francisco.

The board said the action was taken "to recognition of the prevailing market interest rates and to assist the progress of economic expansion. On Nov. 10 the board approved reductions in the discount rate to 4 3/4 percent

With Fraud NEW YORK, Dec. 10 (WP) .-A stockholder in Investors Over-sens Services yesterday filed suit against the once-giant mutual fund complex, the principal underwriters of its 1969 public offering, its accountants and its former chairman for alleged fraudulent acts in connection with the sale.

The suit was the second against IOS and Bernard Cornfeld, its founder and former head, in a week. Last Thursday, the Justice Department asked $74.9 million in damages for allegedly illegal trading in gold.

Among the investment banking firms named in the latest case are some of the best-known in the world, including Drexel Firestone Inc. and Smith, Barney & Co., in the United States; Banque Rothschild of France; Hill Samuel & Co. and Guinness Mahon & Co. of Britain; Pierson, Heldring & Pierson of the Netherlands and J. H. Crang & Co. of Canada, Another defendant is Arthur Andersen & Co., the auditors for IOS until giving up the position last June.

According to the complaint, filed in U.S. district court here, the underwriters used a fraudulent prospectus in the offering. The IOS sale, which received worldwide publicity, was made up of 10.992 million shares, fold at $10 each. There is virtually no market for the shares at the present time, although some have changed hands at about 35 cents a share. The suit was filed by Howar Bersch, who formerly worked as an assistant to an IOS director. Mr. Bersch bought 600 shares of stock in the offering.

The papers charge that by taking part in the offering, the underwriters "impliedly represented to the public that IOS was a suitable company for public ownership." Instead, according ownership." Instead, according to the suit, IOS was engaged in violating currency laws of many countries, it was suffering a severe shortage of cash, its books and records were in chaotic condition, the company was losing money on a substantial part of its business and, at the time of the offering, IOS was insolvent,

Greater future income can be the goal of a $5,000 portfolio placed under management now

If the money you have today is to grow in the future toward more income, or for education, travel, leisure, retirement, it must be kept working full time to achieve your goals. Yet you may find that you are actually losing ground due to juffation, taxes or lack of time for investment decisions. To help solve this problem, clients in 55 countries have turned to The Danforth Associates Investment Management Plan. It has, we believe, proved especially efficient in providing continuing capital growth supervision for portfolios of from $5,000 to $50,000—on behalf of people who recog-nize and can share the risks and rewards of common stock investments. The cost is modest, as low as $100 per year, price swings and other evidences

"I am very concerned about the liquidity of the stock market, heads who are worried to death about it." says William McChesney Martin jr., the former Federal Reserve Board chairman who has spent the better part of this year studying the problems of the securities industry.

The liquidity problem has been a long time abuilding, and a long time ignored. The causes are many, but the main one is the declining role of the small in-

In times past, the market was dominated by millions of small investors with widely varied investment objectives and opinions. Thus whenever one wanted to sell there was always another willing to buy at or near the prevailing price. In 1955, these investors accounted for nearly two-thirds of the trading volume on the New York Stock Exchange. Gradually, however, the bulk of the volume has shifted to the various institutional investors, and the individuals now account for only a little over 20 percent of the volume. These institutions, relatively few in number as compared with individuals, have roughly similar investment objectives and so tend to want to buy or sell the same stocks at the same time. This makes matching buyer and seller difficult, leads to sharp price fluctuations and scares investors, hig and little, from the market.

While many brokers and market analysis are concerned about liquidity, they differ over its nature and seriousness. Some believe market illiquidity is temporary, a result of the uncertain economy. Others contend that massive public participation in

THE MINISTER FOR JUSTICE By Terence de Vere White, Gambit, 257 in $5.9 SIX BLACK HORSES

ALTHOUGH they differ in everything else, these two novels have one trait in common. They show that when it comes to reaching for power, advantage and money the loftiest professional practice can be an extension of the lowliest commercial enterprise.

In one case the maneuvering and power plays will be executed in flawless English, over sherry and in book-lined precincts of club and office. In the latter, mayhem, murder, arson and other attractive social activities will be employed. But the calculating mind, the indifferent heart, the callous spirit are to be found all over. Only the accidents of time, birth and social position prevent these assorted characters from changing places. But, given a little time, they would find no trouble accommodating themselves to their new opportunities.

"The Minister for Justice" is refined entertainment: civilized clever, intricately but plausibly plotted, full of honest sentiment and a pleasure to read. Mr. White, an Irish novelist and blographer, is shameless in manipulating the feelings of his readers. He lines them on the side of virtue and they go through the book cheering for the right side to win. I am gratified to report. without the danger of diminishing anyone's enjoyment, that it does. Stephen Foster, a lawyer honored by his colleagues, respected by his opponents and revered by hisstaff, receives a visit in his slightly rundown house in the outskirts of Dublin from a onetime secretary. She has an odd tale to tell. She remembers a will, drawn and witnessed by Foster, that had not been executed to the last letter of the law. It was a will that deprived a man of his aunt's inheritance. The aunt had cut him off, and all the money had gone to charity. The secretary went on to say that she was now being courted by the disinherited nephew, who had not a sixpence to his name. She had come to the lawyer to point out the error and to get back some of the charity money for her husband-to-be.

Her visit opens a big can of worms. She is saying in effect Loved One," the subject is that this pillar of the Irish bar did something illegal and would want to cover it up. Mind you. neither the nephew nor his girl friend have moral scruples about the business. They only want

"My father is a very smart man," Killy said yesterday. "When I was 16, he knew I would not be real good at school—always thinking about skiing all the time." "You must remember, though, that if I wouldn't have made it in skiing. I wouldn't have really been stuck. You didn't need much money to be happy in Val d'Isère. You work six months a year, when there is snow, and you never get rich, but it is the best life of all because you are happy," said Killy.

"I helieve life should be that way. You should do what you want to do. If you can."

Natural Man

Killy could because he practiced 14 to 18 hours a day, and experimented with different ski waxes, and kept an assortment of performance charts. Being a natural didn't hurt, either. But, unfortunately, natural talent is not something you can teach someone else and that is why he says he would not make a good With all the business interests now, there wouldn't be much time for giving lessons, and there is the movie "Snow Job." soon to be released, which "will maybe create more oppor-tunities. Though I am not really looking for that," said Killy. He plays a young skier in the movie—he is 28—who steals some money and must ski over a glacier to escape with it. A French ski magazine, previewing the film, shows a photo of a young man, wearing skis, jumping off a rising telecabine which is about 30 feet off the ground. It is too dangerous a stunt for the valuable legs of the French idol, who could use a double. but Killy, who always took "more risks" than anyone to win a race, said, "Who else would

Known as "La Ruche"—the beshive—the circular building with a curious Chinese lanternstyle steeple was built as an exhibition hall for the 1900 exposition in the Montparnasse area. The area was the center of the early 1930 modern art movement and hundreds of artists set up studies in the building, including Chagall, Braque, Soutine and Altmann, and it is still a maze of studios. Threatened by demolition for apartment development, a threeyear campaign to save it has succeeded with the anonymous gift filling out a fund to buy the land. The Ministry of Cultural Affairs gave 500,000 francs ($90,000) to help the artist occupants restore the building and its surroundings.

Maurice Girodias and Missionary Zeal

PARIS.—In the mid-1960s Maurice Girodies. owner of the Olympia Press and publisher of lavishly-titled, green-covered dirty books, or D.B.s as the coviy called them, found it prudent to leave his native France where he had been prosecuted and, among other things, banned from publishing for 80 years, later reduced to

Mr. Girodias went to the New World and flourished. He is now briefly in Paris, plumper, happier and, like so many American businessmen, full of missionary

"I think all Frenchmen should be sent to America for five years to change their nation," he says. "The United States is terribly exciting and inspiring. America has moved from puritanism to freedom." Most people would be happy to have helped revolutionize the United States, but Mr. Girodias looks further still. "I want to publish books in Russian to accelerate the revolution there and bring modern life to them," he says. He is preparing a series of about five erotic nevels in Russian, rather on the lines of his old Travellers Companion books which American college kids used to smuggle home in the 50s and 60s. He hopes they will be bought by Russian tourists and seamen, and smuggled into the

"Having been called the Lenin of the Sexual Revolution in Finland, where they should know about it, I have a job to perform," says Mr. Giredias who inherited his trade and his admirably straight face from his late father, a Paris-based Englishman.

Among the books he intends to have smuggled into Russia is one that he says was recently smuggled out: "Moscow Nights," a D.B. that Olympla Press is currently launching in some 10 countries from Italy to Japan.

"Moscow Nights" deals loosely with a plan to break the Soviet government monopoly on burial plots and is full of snow: sexual extravagances. Its underfurt, but he won the case. ground author is anonymous but Mr. Girodias is satisfied that he exists and Olympia Press is doing so well in its says, "but it is impulsive and indicative of life in Russia today and of the insane desire to get rid of the Russian establishment and start a new culture. The first Weapon the writer finds is sex. "I think this book, which is inferior to anything Solzhenitsyn ever wrote in terms of writing, will be more effective than Solzhenitsyn's books because it is more aggressive, more understandable to the uninformed public, and more exciting in

After invading Russin, Mr. Girodias hopes to publish the first erotic book from Communist China. Meanwhile, back in the decadent West, he is planning to open Olympia Press branches in such countries as Israel, Turkey, Mexico, Yugoslavia, and even France where he was attacked for publishing English-language editions of books that circulated freely in French and where he found he could delay selzure of his books by changing their names so they would appear alphabetically lower down on the banned books list. "Candy" became "Lollipop" and "Desire and Helen" became "Helen and Desire." I'm a legal virgin in France again." Mr. Girodias says, adding, "It's hard to know where I stand and I'm not eager to know. Since I'm a French citizen I try beliave the French way, which is to do things the best I can and not to know too much. Only Germany, of all places, has caused Mr. Girodias any problems recently. His book "Barbara" was prosecuted in Frank-

"I found the jury hadn't read the book," he says, "We hired an actor to read it out loud, a terrible octor with a droning, monotone voice. It took three days. The jury fell asleep. We showed obscenity was not such a bad matter if people could fall

New York headquarters, Mr. Girodias says, that it is gradually turning itself into an establishment house. "We have no money worries any more, which is strange. We sre going to diversify to more spectacular stuff, not necessarily sex-oriented, and we're going into films. Within a year we will establish a new image of Olympia Press as it should have been from the start."

Pornography has ceased to exist in the United States, Mr. Girodias claims. existed as a passing phenomenon, the pornography publishers have gone out of Which doesn't mean that sex isn't here to stay. Mr. Girodias claims that 60 to 70 percent of all New York publishers' lines now deals with sex, though many of the books may be published under the imprints of little-known subsidiarles.

"In the past few years," Mr. Girodias says, "I think we've defined a kind of erotic fiction which is being accepted by the trade and critics-well, maybe not by the criticsas a new brand of literature, like science

Mr. Girodias, father of two daughters and grandfather of a baby named Siegfried, looks on the sexual revolution in the United States with a sort of family pride.

"I've become very corny. Our books have done a lot to accelerate the changes. The revolution wouldn't have happened without Henry Miller, whom my father published. Of course, there was Freud to start with, but he was a theoretician. Miller was an activist. Between Freud, Miller, my daddy

Like the rest of us. Monica do Rellerman's telephone bill kept recording 200 or 300 extra message units per month that she swore she hadn't used. The cruncher came when the New York PR executive returned from 2 3 1/2-week vacation to find she had 500 extra-message units on her bill Complaints, of course, were fruitless. Then she remembered J. Paul Geity's system. The oil billionaire, she recalled, hada pay phone installed in his Dalles home, so Miss de Hellerman did just that in her 86th Street apartment. "It's working out beautifully," Monics told The New York Times the other day. 'I'm saving money, the phone usually works and it's sort of campy, a great conversation New York telephone officials don't share her glee. "It's a mis-take," said one spokesman. "The phone will be removed as soon as we catch up with it." He admitted, however, that there were 50 to 100 pay phones "mistakenly" installed in private New York City homes And though the authorities dispute it. Miss de Helierman swears she's saving money. For a regular telephone, she paid an $8.75 installation charge plus $9.77 monthly ser-vice charge which included 50 message units ("but I was getting billed for hundreds of units!") Her pay phone cost $20 to install. She pays monthly rental of $11.57, and while each call costs 10 cents for five minutes, the coins in the box are applied to her next monthly rental fee. "Some people may think I'm eccentric," allowed Monica, "but I'll be damned if I'll spend money to lose money."

A French legal magazine has been ordered to make a symbolic one-franc payment for damages to the 71-year-old man whose divorce case it reported in extenso. The man sued the magazine because it reported his wife won her divorce on the grounds of his "excess virility." In a judgment handed down Wednesday, a Paris civil court ruled that while the magazine was authorized by law to report court rulings, it should not have identified the couple by name and town of residence, and should have used, as it does in other cases, initials.

The Christmas season is barely under way and already we've got our first candidate for Scroogethe postal authorities in Liverpool, England. It all had to do with Jim Gilmour's decision to use his private phone for a free "Dial-a-Santa" service for handicapped children. Within days, said the post office (which handles telephone service in Britain), Gilmour began receiving more than 1,000 calls a day from kids placing their Christmas orders with the Old Man himself. The Liverpool lines, it seems, were jammed: Mr. Gilmour was causing absolute chaos," said a harried official. So the service was dis-continued. Children who haven't yet got the word are being told the post office: "Father Christmas's number is not official." Humbug.
